

BEING JOE COOL

The installation "Being Joe Cool" at Nordic Light Hotel is part of the world-wide 60th anniversary of the comic strip Peanuts, a celebration of Snoopy, his friends and their creator Charles M. Schulz

Joe Cool is one of Snoopy's many alter egos, the cool student, always equipped with dark sunglasses and often wearing the typical American college sweatshirt. First appearing in 1971, Joe Cool is a child of his time striving for individuality, cool lingo and being a part of the subcultures of that era: surfing, hanging out on the beach, and the noble art of checking out chicks by the water fountain. In other words: The Art of Being Cool - Joe Cool, that is.

The concept of this installation is a contemporary interpretation of Joe Cool, based on showing what is inside the head of the character, thus inviting the audience inside his doghouse to take part in his thoughts, lifestyle and mindset.

In addition to this, we've invited a number of creative Swedish people to style their personal version of a Joe Cool figurine, showing the many faces and ways of Cool. These statuettes will be auctioned out for Friends beneficial work against bullying at the end of the exhibition period. Take the chance to own a unique Joe Cool by entering your bid and at the same time taking a stand against bullying!

ABOUT PEANUTS

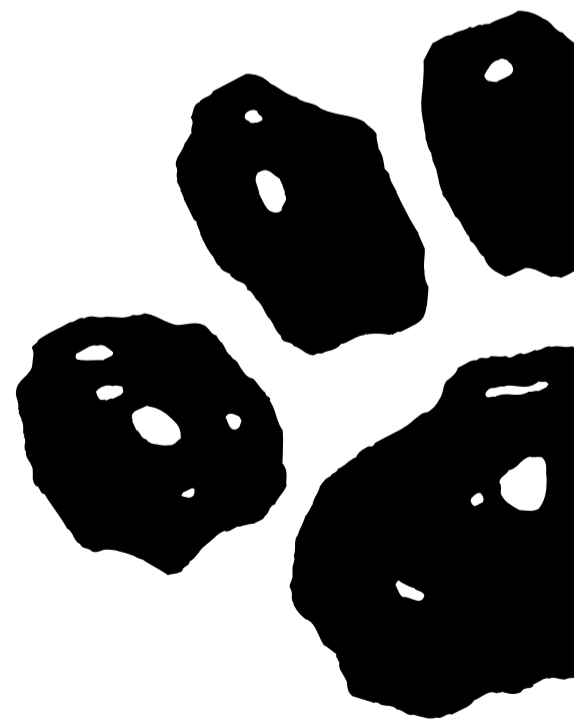

Charles M. Schulz' Peanuts was launched in only seven newspapers on October 2, 1950, but the strip has long since grown to become one of the most widely read comics of all time and characters like Snoopy, Charlie Brown, Linus and Lucy are known everywhere. Sweden was one of the first countries to pick up the comic, already in 1954, but the great breakthrough didn't come until a few years later.

Part of the strip's success has been due to Snoopy's growing ability to dream, imagine, play and take on various alter egos, like the World War I Flying Ace, the World-Famous Author, and the college student Joe Cool.

Already in 1959, Snoopy appeared in the strip as the "Big Man on Campus". But it wasn't until May 1971 that he for the first time officially appeared as Joe Cool - a name that Charles Schulz first had picked up as he overheard a conversation between his son Craig and some other teenagers. The Joe Cool character was most common in Peanuts in the 1970s but also made some later appearances until the strip's end in 2000. Of course, he has also been seen in the Peanuts television specials and has also been celebrated in theme songs by musicians like B.B. King and Wynton Marsalis.
